Recent Meetings

While the January 25, 1982 regular meeting of GSWC was cancelled because of heavy snow and ice, the planned program was brought to us at our next regular meeting, February 28, 1982. Steven Shomin, a full-blooded Michigan Indian, born in Cross Village, reviewed some family history. He is now Chief Sky Eagle, named by the Ottawa Council meeting in Petoskey, where he was preceded by his Uncle, Chief Joe Shomin. The Durant Roll Book begun in 1870 includes 8500 names of northern Michigan Indians who must have proven they are at least one-quarter Indian blood. This section of the roll was completed in 1908 and can be seen at the Council in Petoskey. Parents were issued Roll Book numbers. The Durant Roll Books are the primary source of Indian heritage in Michigan.

Milton Charbaneau has spent fifteen years in intensive study of early Michigan history before and after the white man, and in the course of this study has traveled most rivers in Michigan. His maps and lecture guided us through the periods of French and English explorers of southern Ontario and the early Michigan Territory. Treaties and territorial governments altered boundaries and counties. Researchers are warned to request information by county according to date of its establishment-not when it was 'set off'. Ask to see 'Transcribed Records' to cover former inclusions.

The program on March 28, 1982 was presented by Allen R. Treppa of Livonia, Michigan, a teacher of american history who spoke about his trip to Warsaw in 1976.

Coming Meetings

May 23 is the date of our annual meeting. Mr. Glenn Ruggles of Union Lake, Michigan will speak about Irish immigrants to Michigan.

Our annual picnic will be held in June and a cemetery reading will take place in July.

The Society Library

The Society library may soon be moved to another location at Washtenaw Community College. This collection is for reference only and books may not be taken from the room. Be sure to sign in each time you visit the library and when leaving, pull the door closed. The reference librarian at the main desk will open the room for you.

Our Contributors

The list of Washtenaw County photographers was compiled by David V. Tinder, a product development engineer by profession, who has spent his spare time for many years seeking out old Michigan photographs and information about the lives and work of the 19th century Michigan photographers. He has identified more than 6000 persons who were involved with professional photography in Michigan before 1900, and hopes to finish organizing his knowledge of them for publication soon as a directory. Dave is a 1949 graduate of the University of Michigan. He will be most appreciative of any information about early Washtenaw County photographers who are not listed, corrections to the working dates shown, or biographical information on any 19th century Michigan photographer. He will also be grateful for any opportunity to add to his significant collection of Michigan photographs.

Dave can be reached by calling (313) 581-0005, or by writing 6404 Coleman, Dearborn, Michigan, 48126.

Mr. Arleigh Squires is the great-grandson of William and Mary Squires who came to Michigan Territory in 1829 from Cayuga County, New York. Mr. Squires, born in 1897 in Milan Township, Monroe County has lived in the Milan area all of his life and has been involved with the community not only as city clerk from 1933 through 1942 but through a successful wood product manufacturing business in Milan. He most recently has given generously of his time to the Milan Area Historical Society and was the Historian contributor for the Bi-Centennial publication, Ancient and Modern Milan. Three more generations of Squires live in the area.

We thank Karen Wheaton and Lillian Hughes, GSWC members, for contributing their family genealogies. The ancestors of Humphrey Davenport, Henry Young and William Hanson are still among the missing. Readers with additional information are encouraged to contact Karen and/or Lillian.

Our Research Chairman, Ruth Whitaker, contributes regularly to the Capers through the Queries column. Her compilation of additional data for the Judd Cemetery is an example of the throughness of her research. Ruth became interested in genealogy about five years ago while living in Fort Worth, Texas. Through her volunteer work with our Society she has done much to keep open the doors of the county offices to researchers. The services of the Research Committee contribute a great deal to our Society. It is Ruth's love of detective work that makes her an ideal chairman for this department.

An Offer of Help

Lawrence R. and Helen Jane (Finkbeiner) Mack, 5824 Trailridge Drive, Austin, Texas, 78731, new members of GSWC and with many old Washtenaw County connections, have offered to help others with German research. Through his research at UT, Larry has established some contacts in West Germany, and if you contact him WITH SUFFICIENTLY DETAILED LOCATIONS IN WEST GERMANY from which your ancestor emigrated, he might be able to assist you in establishing contact. Larry emphasized that he cannot do anything with generalized data - only specific towns or villages. Larry and Jane sent us a good deal of information on their families which includes Albers, Finkbeiners, Heimerdingers, Macks - many of the early German names in the county.

WASHTENAW COUNTY PHOTOGRAPHERS 1850-1910

By Dave Tinder

The following list of professional photographers was gleaned from Michigan State Gazetters, city directories, the mounts of old photographs and other primary sources. It undoubtedly omits many early photographers and some later ones who did not stay in one place for very long. It is hoped that the list will prove to be helpful in dating family photographs.

Within each community, the photographers are presented in the order in which they are first known to have done business there. It is probable that many of them were in business prior to the dates indicated, and that some stayed in business longer than indicated, particularly those who worked into the 20th century.

It is often possible to date a 19th Century photograph quite accurately from the type of mount, printed information on the mount and evidence within the picture. For instance, many photographers identified their location in different ways during various time periods. Such information is beyond the scope of this article, but help can be provided by the author or others who have developed expertise in dating old photographs.

YORK TOWNSHIP, ANCIENT AND MODERN HAPPENINGS
By Arleigh N. Squires

It is safe to assume that occasional hunters and fur traders traversed the land that eventually would become known as York Township. It was not until 1823, when Woodruff's Grove, later absorbed by the southward sprawl of Ypsilanti, was established as the first settlement in the county. The following year Ann Arbor, further up the Huron River, was attracting settlers. In 1825 the opening of the Erie Canal provided the impetus for the great westward migration from the State of New York and New England which provided York Township with its early residents. As a result the township's population would number 1,197 in 1837, the year that Michigan was admitted to statehood.

Until March 1834, when the organization of York was approved by the Territorial Legislature, its lands were divided between Ypsilanti and Saline Townships. Its name was suggested by Representative William Moore and derived from the 'York State' origins of so many of its inhabitants. At this date Mooreville had a single log cabin owned by Boaz Lampson who presided over the first town meeting which chose the first township officers: Noah Wolcott, Supervisor; William Moore, Justice of the Peace; and Othniel Gooding, Clerk. The establishment of civil government ratified the esistence of the previously erected bench marks of westering civilization.

The list of the Supervisors of the Township from 1880 follows.

John W. Blakeslee	1880-82	John Lawson	1917-32
Alfred Davenport	1883-97	Herman Oelke	1933-48
Archibald D. McIntyre	1898-01	Mrs. Herman Oelke	1948-49
Edward P. Warner	1902-06	Thurlow Sanford	1949-70
Sherman Cook	1907-08	Charles Hayes	1971-74
George F. Richards	1909-12	Sandra Richardson	1975-82
William Kelsey	1913-16

Mooreville grew more rapidly than Milan, and soon had the following: five churches, two saw mills, a cheese factory, a cider mill, two stores, two blacksmith shops, a wagon shop, a saloon, a hotel and school. The two saw mills furnished lumber for a large portion of the building in Washtenaw County. The stage coach from Monroe to Adrian and Jackson stopped at Mooreville and the cost the the ride was five cents per mile. The Free Methodist Church, located just east of the store, became the Macabee Hall in 1905 and was the scene of dances twice a week. In 1930 it became the York Township Hall. Recently the building was sold to be used as a dwelling. The village continued to grow until 1890 when the Toledo and Ann Arbor Railroad running north and south, and the Detroit and Butler Railroad, running east and west, crossed in Milan. Milan then began to grow and much of the Mooreville population moved to Milan. Now Mooreville has one general store and about thirty homes. Two paved roads cross at this point, and the store serves a number of farmers in this area, and other customers who love to visit a real country store.

Milan, Located in York and Milan Townships

Milan is located on the Saline River, partly in Milan Township, Monroe County, and partly in York Township, Washtenaw County. The boundary line passes through Milan, leaving a greater part in York Township. The Milan Township portion of the city now contains the greater portion of the industries.

John Marvin was the first settler in this vicinity, and built a log cabin in 1830 on the site of the public parking lot, between the Danube Inn and the police station on West Main Street. A number of pioneers followed and took up grants of land, and paid the government $1.25 per acre for their sites. William E. Marvin, a son of John, settled soon after his father. He started a small store, the first in this locality where both wet and dry goods were sold. In 1834 William and David Woodward built the first flour mill powered by water from the Saline River. It contained two small stones for grinding wheat into flour. These men also built a saw mill next to the flour mill which was steam powered. These industries changed hands many times. The saw mill was finally closed and the flour mill was purchased by the Ford Motor Company in 1936. Ford purchased other properties joining the mill and installed a modern power plant and dam on the river. This furnished much of the power used for their operation, which was processing soy beans and operating a coil factory in one of the buildings. Ford also moved the river to fit the location of the dam, which converted a swampy spot of land into Ford Lake, about ten acres in size. In 1948 the entire holdings of Ford Motor Company were sold to the village. The power plant was converted into our city hall. The soy bean storage building was converted into our community hall and the other buildings were used by the street department. The coil building was used by the police department until 1975 when this department moved into its present quarters on West Main Street.

Milan was chartered as a village in 1885, and on March 25 the first council meeting was held in the office of Buckley W. Marble on East Main Street. The meeting was called to order by President N.C.Putman, with the following trustees present: E.F. Byle, C.H. Wilson, D.W. Hitchcock, L.C.Hitchcock and C. Gauntlett. It continued to operate as a village until November 13, 1967 when a city charter was approved and the following candidates were elected: Mayor, Milliard F. Phillips; Councilmen, Ethel Richards, Charles Maupin, James D. Cullip, Duane A. Schultz, Leroy Cabbage and Frederick Smith; Justice of the Peace, John Stommen.

Seeing the need for a proper place in which people could meet for Christian worship, on March 22, 1866, Thomas and Hannah Braman executed a deed for a property on West Main Street to James Gauntlett, Alexander Wilcox, Albert Case, Thomas Braman and Harmon Allen, trustees of the Milan Union Church Society. The trustees represented the five denominations holding meetings in their homes. The deed stipulated the building was for a house of worship, provided that no one denomination of Christians shall have the use of the church more often than once every two weeks, and stated that said house shall be open for religious worship by all denominations. The church was built at a cost of $3500.00 and is 35 by 50 feet. As the different denominations increased in number, they broke away and erected their own churches. The building stood idle for some time and during World War 1 was used as a Red Cross center, then a Boy Scout headquarters, then the school system used it for a kindergarden. On October 10, 1933 the building was sold to York Township for a township hall, for $2500.00- each of the five denominations received $500.00 from the sale. The township later sold the property to the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latterday Saints and it is a thriving church again.

The industries in Milan Township today are: P. K. A. Foundry, Milan Pattern Works, Mather Company, Floortec Div., Fruehauf Div., Ford Motor Company, Clark Perforation Company, Inc., Sohigro Services, Bimac Inc. Industries in York Township; Milan Screw Products, Inc., Woodmark Industries, Precision Devices, Inc., Milan Cast Metals Corporation, Owens Illinois Forest Products Division.

The city has nine churches, one lumber yard, two grain elevators, one farm equipment company, four doctors and four dentists.

THE EARLY LIFE OF JAMES H. FULLER, YORK SETTLER

Pioneer life in York Township is vividly described by James H. Fuller in a handwritten story prepared at age eighty for his "two daughters, two sons, their children and a number of nieces and nephews who already are grandparents".[1] Recognizing that the writing of a complete family history is no small task, he settled for a short biographical sketch, which ends about the time he met his future wife, Mary Ann Bouney.

James' father, Levi Fuller, was born ca 1783 near Fishkill Landing, Dutchess County, New York. James' mother, Draxala Fuller, nee McLouth, was born ca 1789 in Berkshire County, Massachusetts. James was born in Wayne County, New York near Clyde it appears, as this is where the story of his childhood takes place.

James' recollections of his childhood near Clyde includes the wonderful fun of "sliding in the moonlight on all sorts and kinds of sleds", with everyone of the boys and girls dressed in clothes made by their mothers or themselves. He recalls a meeting with an earnest foot traveler later found to be Joe Smith, the founder of the Mormons, of Palmyra or Shortsville. The author describes the geography of Galen Township and the mode of living in early days fully and enthusiastically. He relates a good bit of family history with the lamentation that contact with many relatives was lost and not too much is known of the Fuller family.

"From my earliest recollection there was a constant stream of emigrants going by canal to the west. Neighbors had sold farms to people from Albany, Utica, and the Mohawk Valley-the Mohawk Dutch as they were called-and moved to Allegheny and Chatuaqua. About 1830 the neighbors sold and went to Ohio and Michigan. Oscar McLouth, a cousin, left in 1830 for Michigan. The next year, Thomas Herrington, my mother's cousin, came also as did Lyman and Calvin Gilmore. In 1832 another neighbor, William Dillon and another of my mother's cousins, William Davis, came to Michigan and settled in York. A cousin, William Fuller, went with Mr. Dillon as hired hand."[2]

By 1833 the Levi Fuller family, with ten children and two sons-in-law, had bought land in York in the same neighborhood and so began a new chapter in the life of young James Fuller.[3]

3. First Landowners of York Township; Levi Fuller, Sec 23 (2 pcs), Oct 1833 & Sec 25, Oct 1833; Alvah Fuller, Sec 22, Nov 1833. The Levi Fuller farm is located in SE ¼ of Sec 23 on the 1856 Bechler & Wenig (Philadelphia) map of Washtenaw County.

While the family and goods traveled by canal to Buffalo and by steamer to Detroit, older brother, Alva, and his friend, John Hadley, drove the horses and wagons and met the family in Detroit. The trip from Detroit to York, about forty miles, took two days. "We stayed the first night with William Davis (on the Uncle Othniel Gooding farm)".[4]

"We soon moved in with William Dillon whose wife had died and left him without a housekeeper". Mr. Dillon's cabin was of hewed logs, two stories high, about 20 by 28 feet with a brick chimney, two fireplaces and two "tight" floors. The lower floor had two bedrooms partitioned off, with a stairway in the corner by the side of the chimney. Sometimes there were twenty-one people to sleep, eat and work in this cabin.

While the men were selecting land the boys put in ten acres of wheat...five at Mr. McLouth's and five on Mr. Dillon's land. James recalls being 'called up about two o'clock in November to witness the most noted star meteor display that was ever recorded.'

It took about two to three weeks to get moved and the land bought. The horses were traded for cattle and "all turned out to build houses for Thomas Dexter[5] and my father." The Fullers built a double log house on sills fifty feet long, with two cribs each twenty by twenty with a hall between them. The fireplace was open with a chimney. "There were no roads except what we had made in building our house. Soon, however, there was a track to the brook and to the neighbors three-quarters of a mile away. They had come from Monroe by the Ypsilanti Road. A saw mill was one mile south of Mooresville.[6] When we moved there was not more than a half-acre of timber cut...By keeping a fire constantly going, a garden patch of ten acres was cleared by spring."

The first fall we were in Michigan people organized a school district and built a school known as the Tamarack School." It was made of round tamarack logs with glass windows, coarse sawed lumber floor, rude benches with desks and heated with a box stove. "We did not go to school much the first winter as it was one and three-quarters miles through the woods with no paths and the woods were full, so to speak, of wild beasts."

"By the first of February we had to make troughs and tap the sugar trees. Levi (a brother of James) and I had to gather sap and attend the boiling. Gathering was done by the use of a neck yoke and buckets by which each could carry two buckets. As I look back I wonder how we succeeded as well as we did-for the troughs, being green, were heavy and some had as much as four gallons (of sap). For a boy not quite 13 to take such a trough and pour it into a bucket without spilling and then take two buckets full and carry them 30 or 40 rods through the brush and empty into a large trough was certainly no light task. But we lived through it and succeeded in making three to four hundred pounds of good dry maple sugar."

4. Othniel Gooding's farm is located in the NW¼ of Sec 15 on the 1856 Bechler & Wenig map of Washtenaw County.

5. Thomas Dexter purchased government land, NW¼ of NE¼ of Sec 15 on 4 Oct 1833.

6. The first saw mill was built at Mooreville in 1832 by Isaac Hathaway.

Soon there was a little settlement of four families close together. William Fuller had purchased eighty acres on the east side of Thomas Dexter, and the fourth place was the Loveridge farm. There was no one south nearer than Milan although some settlers were along the river. The sounds of ax and falling timbers from neighbor's farms were welcomed. James recalls the pleasure of mutual dependence-some people came from four or five miles to help raise a house.

"At the end of the first year we had about thirteen acres cleared and fenced, and had raised forty to fifty acres of corn, some potatoes, a patch of oats which was heavy. I had with one horse and shovel-plough dug up the 202 acres and it was sowed to turnips-and they were fine. The next winter we cut down the timber so that we could see to William Fuller's chopping and to Thomas Dexter's and cut out the road up to Mr. Inman's...And so us boys got to go to school some. And so year after year it was chop and log, chop and log...Alva married in 1835.[7] I think before I was sixteen Utter was married...but we had a clearing one-half mile in the road and Thomas Dexter had some twenty acres cleared while the farm across the road had cleared up to the road-so I suppose there was perhaps one hundred acres of improved land in a body-which was relly quite a hole."

James continues on with his story of the coming of other early settlers, the starting of another saw mill, this on the river where Milan now is. In 1836 a log church house was built on a "laid out" road known as Ridge Road-the route from Ypsilanti to Adrian crossing the Saline River at Mooreville. This soon became a rendevous for miles around and "its influence in molding public sentiment will never be known". "It was a wild looking place when built but soon cleared up. Many people came to meetings on foot-others by ox team. It was a common thing when it was warm and wet for the boys and girls to go barefoot until they got near the church, find a pool of water, wash their feet, put on clean stockings and their shoes which they had carried in their hands...and go into church as presentable as need be."

By the spring of 1837 the younger brothers, John and Thomas, were grown enough to help considerably and so James went to work for one month in May for Mr. Wheeler,[8] earning ten dollars with which he got some clothes. As he was then the oldest son at home he also helped his father, not only with their farm but also in clearing twenty acres of land for Parley Phillips.

The Fuller family lost their home by fire in October when James was eighteen. Except for three beds, some chairs and some yarn that was ready for weaving, all was lost. The loss of Grandmother McLouth's lifetime savings-papers, records, bric-a-brac and her husband's Revolutionary War enlistment and discharge papers was keenly felt. Thomas Dexter and Mr. Robinson took their teams and went soliciting. Neighbors came in a few days and within a week's time a new house was up. Mr. and Mrs. Fuller never recovered from this loss. James felt unable to go anywhere in company as he had no suitable clothes. Another sufferer was sister, Annis, who had planned to marry that winter but as most of her clothes were lost the wedding was postposed.[9] The load thrown upon James and Annis in rebuilding a home for their parents seemed overwhelming. The end result was an everlasting bond of affection between the brother and sister. James, at age eighty, praises his sister by writing: "my sister, Annis, was one of the noblest women I ever knew."

In the spring of 1841, as the family farm was in fair shape and the younger brothers were old enough to attend the work, James went out to work for wages. He worked at first for Esquire Moore for six months at $2.00 a month, using some of the money to buy a suit of clothes.[10] The following years he worked for the same man and contracted to buy forty acres of land from him, taking one and one-half years to pay on it. It was when he went to work for Aaron Warren for six months at $12.50 a month that he met Mary Ann Bouney, who lived with the Warrens as she was an orphan. Mary Ann was to become the wife of James Fuller but we learn no more of the romance as we have now come to the end of this moving story.

10. Esquire William Moore purchased government land, W½ of SW¼ of Sec 29 on 8 Jun 1831. He and Aaron R. Wheeler were the first two Justices of the Peace, being appointed by the Territorial Governor. The Honorable William Moore was a member of the Territorial Legislature.
